No, No, Nanette

To those who saw the musical, the mention of "No, No, Nanette" brings to mind bright costumes, production numbers and flashing tap shoes. A combined effort of Buffalo Grove and Hersey Drama Departments, the play was set in 1925, when dresses were longer and the music was the Charleston.

The musical involves the romantic mix-ups of girl millionaire Nanette Smith (Paula Kinney) and the sticky situations of Nanette's heart-of-gold uncle-guardian Jimmy (Tony Zungrone). The troubles of the two are confounded by the interference of three greedy women (Jill Thomas, Adrienne Farnaus, and Laura Paa), Jimmy's best friend Billy (Scott Rothermel), his free spirited wife (Nancy Wildberger) and Nanette's aunt (Laura Babowski). Central to Nanette's happiness, though, is Nanette's fiance Tom (Jeff Anderson) who wants, naturally, to get married. Nanette, however, has other ideas — she wants to "raise a little hell first!" And watching it all happen is the Smith's wary-eyed maid Pauline (Patty Lee).

Fall Round-Up

October 13, the Bison stampeded into this year's homecoming festivities. Spirit was evident in the heart of every Bison as he looked forward to the battle with the Huskies on Saturday. The week stepped off with Bisontennial Day, students wore red, white, and blue. Following days were designated as crazy socks and hat, grub, school colors, and Western day. On Western day the seniors crashed onto the warpath as Indians, and the fight song could be heard in the halls. During an all school assembly queen candidates Bridget Baio, Claudia Confer, Jan Cobe, Beth Deter, and Mary Pat Schmidt were presented. The coronation assembly, complete with honor guard and Rennaissance trumpeters, was held on Thursday. Mary Pat Schmidt was then crowned the 1975 homecoming queen, and a parade through the community followed. Friday was highlighted with a pep assembly complete with tug-of-wars and coach-dunking. Saturday the Bison lost after a heart breaking double overtime battle, 21-28. Homecoming concluded with a dance over which the homecoming court ruled.

Star Spangled Girl

October 9 and 10 Buffalo Grove presented "Star Spangled Girl", a comedy by Neil Simon. The show was directed by John Marquette and Linda McEachran and was performed on a set by Kathryn Schafer.

The play concerns two underground newspaper reporters. An eccentric radical Norman Cornell (Rodney McKenzie) and his fairly rational editor and roommate Andy Hobart (Rob Wilson) both fall in love with their beautiful blonde neighbor Sophie Rouschmyer (double cast with Barb Sedore playing the first night; Joy Thorbjornsen, the second). Luckily the men discover their love at different times. The foibles of this love-triangle lead to many moments of wry humor. Eventually, Sophie decides that she is in love with Andy. However, this does not stop Norman for long; he falls in love with a beautiful redhead who has just moved in next door. The play provided many hilarious moments.

Norman (Rodney) interupts lovers Andy (Rob) and Sophie (Joy).

Sophie (Barb) introduces herself to Andy (Rob).

Norman (Rodney) adores the smell of Sophie (Joy).

Marine Corps Assembly

Buffalo Grove hosted the United States Marine Corps Official Presidential Drill Team, Color Guard, and Drum and Bugle Corps at an all-school assembly. These groups have performed for the President of the United States and at various state functions, such as, receptions for heads of state, state dinners, etc. Mr. Patberg, Assistant Principal at Buffalo Grove, was instrumental in getting the Marine Corps Commandant's approval for their appearance here. Besides playing traditional band music, such as "Semper Fidelis", and the National Anthem, the Drum and Bugle Corps also played popular songs, such as "The Way We Were". The Drill Team followed, impressing students with their precision movements and skillful rifle tosses and spins. Mr. Patberg said that he was very pleased that he was able to provide assembly for the students during this Bicentennial year. The students' spellbound attention given to the performance and standing ovations were indications of their appreciation.

Football

The Bison had a good year in football, although it was not the best in recent years. The team's offense and defense were evenly developed, neither one being developed at the expense of the other. One weakness of the team, however, was that many players played both offense and defense; this practice hurt the depth of the team. The sprint out delay run and the sprint out delay pass were the team's best plays and gained the most yardage.

The Hersey game was the most exciting of the season. Both teams were well prepared. The Bison lost to the Huskies at last year's homecoming, and the Bison did not want to have history repeated at this year's homecoming game. The teams were evenly matched, and the game went into two overtimes. The suspense ended when the Bison fumbled the ball, and Hersey recovered it to win the game 28 to 21. Although disappointing, the game will be remembered for a long time.

The season also contained a new first for the Bison as they played their first game with an out of state team, St. Regis of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Swimming

Swimming began its third season with Coach Maxson returning; she was joined by assistant Coach Reno. The team consisted of twenty-two new girls and fifteen returning girls. The team's captains were Paula Ralston and Cathy Shekelton for the swimming squad and Sue Gebo for the diving squad.

Daily practices were much the same as last year, but agonizing "lung busters" were added to build up the girls endurance. Practices were designed for the needs of the team; before meets starts, turns and events are worked on. The girls learned discipline and cooperation. Divers trained with warm-ups on the board: approaches, jumps, the five required dives for meets, and any optional dives the girls wished to work on.

The most valuable swimmers this year were Debbie Cornell, Teresa DeGroh, Sue Eliot, Cheryl Kashmere, Pam McEachern, and Ann Rusche. The most valuable divers were Sue Gebo and Cathy Furlong.

Coach Maxson's hopes for next year's team are a stronger team and more girls that swim butterfly.

Golf

The Buffalo Grove golf team enjoyed a very successful season. The team slated a 9-3 record and finished third in conference and second in districts. The highlights of the season were defeating Palatine (which finished first in conference) and going to sectionals. In addition, Mike Marshall and Dan Krolack were selected to the all-conference team. Other top players on the varsity squad were Rich Peterson, Bob Hoffman, Doug Warman, Rick Lahrman, Keith White, Gregg Wolfe, Tony Puciaty, and Brian Monson. Coach VanIten calls the returning team "potentially great", but "the future depends on the players' willingness to dedicate their time to improve themselves." Of the ten players on the squad, eight will return next year, and they are expected to do even better next season.

Tennis

The varsity tennis team achieved a 4-8 record this year; this a substantial improvement over previous year's records. The primary reason for poor performance in previous years was lack of experience. This years team consisted of one senior, two juniors, three sophomores, and five freshmen. Coach Pruitt felt that the team maintained good morale throughout the season. They devoted many hours after school trying to improve their skills.

Freshman Lisa Smart was the most consistent player; she lost only one set the entire season. Smart eventually went on to state competition. She won her first match, but she was defeated by Kathy Carson, who went on to become the state runner-up.

Coach Pruitt believes that if the team works harder next year, it will become a fiercer contender for conference championship. The junior varsity, under the direction of Coach Penstone, had a fine, first season, winning seven meets and losing five.

Cross Country

The varsity cross country team, under head coach Frank DeRosa, has begun to develop a fine nucleus of young runners. In spite of a 1-4 conference record, DeRosa feels the team has made some real accomplishments it can be proud of. Captained by Steve March, Joe Schmidt, and Joe Shields, the team improved 43 points on the Buffalo Grove 1974 squad in the district meet. Schmidt set a new school record at 15:29. In addition, Schmidt and Shields smashed the home team's course record at Cary Grove by :03 seconds. Not having senior runners might have affected the disappointing record, but with five juniors and eleven sophomores returning, high hopes are set for the future.

Coach Beauprie had a special problem season with only six girls on her squad. The first team to have five of its members cross the finish line on a two-mile course wins the race. Therefore, the chances of victory increase with the number of runners a team has. With only six girls, winning was almost impossible for the Buffalo Grove team. Hopefully, with better organization and more participation the team will improve next year.

Archery

"Although they didn't do so hot in the beginning, the team got progressively better," said Coach Benjamin about the progress of this year's archery team. "Our weakest point is our inexperience."

The team ended its first season with a moderately impressive 3-7 record.

In training the girls, Coach Benjamin instituted a "Top Ten" shooting list. The list allowed the best members to shoot in competition and eight substitutes were left to vie for a place on the list. The list provided healthy competition for the girls and kept their spirit and determination high. It also encouraged the girls to develop their individual skills, because archery is more an individual rather than a team-oriented sport.

Several members placed in the conference meet. Donna Huyser took a second place medal at the 20-yard line in the first position. Sharon Bouchard took a third place medal at the 20-yard line in the fourth position. Finally, Diane Parker took a third place medal in the seventh position at the 20-yard line.

WINTER

Vacation Vibrations

After weeks of practice and hard work the Buffalo Grove Music Department started the Winter Week activities by presenting "Vacation Vibrarions" on December 14. According to Motet Tricia Lindholm, "It was hard work putting the songs together, but all in all it was worth it." The Motets, a new madrigal choir formed and directed by Mr. Boyd White, performed for the first time. Other organizations participating were the Varsity Singes, Concert Choir, Handbell Ringers, and Orchestra. The Orchestra was joined by members of Orchesis who danced to two selections of "The Nutcracker Suite." For the finale the Freshman Choir, Varsity Singers, Concert Choir, and Orchestra joined together in presenting the "Halleujah Chorus" by Handel. Mary Rose Fabish summed up her impressions by saying, "I think that in spite of the fact that it was raining while we were singing 'Sleigh Ride,' the Christmasy feeling got around."

The Glass Menagerie

Tennessee Williams' exploration of loneliness "The Glass Menagerie" was presented on January 17,21,22 and 24. It was Miss Katherine Schafer's directing debut at Buffalo Grove.

The play concerns an over-protective woman, Amanda Wingfield (double cast with Sue Lesch and Margaret deGroh), who fears her daughter Laura (doube cast with Laura Salat and Treasa deGroh) may end up an old maid. Because of this fear, she nags her son Tom (double cast with Dave Lesch and Mark Anderson), to get a gentleman caller for Laura. Tom eventually brings home Jim O'Connor (Rob Wilson) not knowing that he and Laura had once known each other in high school.

The play reaches its high point when Jim announces that he is engaged to be married and will not call again. This shatters all hope Amanda has left for her daughter, and dejected, Tom walks out, never to return.

The play was performed in three-quarter round platforms with the audience seated on risers upon the stage. This created an intimate atmosphere for the play.

President Ford

Buffalo Grove was the last stop for President Gerald R. Ford on his whirlwind tour of Illinois March 12 prior to the state's primary election. A packed gym — and an overflow crowd (that would watch the speech on closed circuit television in the fieldhouse) waited several hours for his arrival. The Bison Band's "Hail to the Chief", a balloon shower, and a standing ovation demonstrated the crowd's enthusiasm.

In his address Ford touched on several subjects. He asked the audience to remember the America of a year-and-a-half ago when the economy was weak and the people's faith in the federal government was shaken. On entering office, Ford said his primary goals were to get the nation back on its feet and to restore its faith in the government. He said America was now well on its way to recovery on both levels.

In concluding, Ford said that with continuation of his administration, "We will have a sound and very solid base on which to build an even greater American, an America which will continue to be a source of inspiration for the best hopes of the entire world. That's what we want for this generation, for the next generation, and the generation after that."

The speech came after two weeks of preparation at Buffalo Grove. Secret Service and White House staffmen were seen throughout the building, which caused a great deal of interest among our female students. As the date of arrival approached, all gym lockers were cleared out; all the air ducts and rafters of the gym were searched for any unusual items stored there; even the school administrators went through a security check. In short, it proved a rare educational experience for the student body.

Winter Fantasy Ball

Attending the 1976 senior class sponsored Winter Dance was a perfect way to end the first semester. The dance was held on January 31, a day after finals. The Winter Fantasy Ball was held in the cafeteria from 8 to 11 p.m. Couples danced to the music of the well received Splash Band. The Band had an exceptional female lead singer who sang many true rock and roll songs. The Splash Band played such popular music as "Stairway to Heaven", a well known Led Zeppelin song. Couples enjoyed the romantic atmosphere the dance brought to mind. Red and white predominated the usually drab cafeteria. Red tablecloths were spread on all tables, with a vase on each table with flowers in them. During the course of that last week of first semester finals, seven senior girls were elected to the Court, one of them would be queen.

The Candidates were: Lynn Leber, Claudia Confer, Jane Kunzie, Laura Fuessle, Patty Furlong, Lori Bruser, and Debby Lemley. The highlight of the Ball was the crowning of the 1976 Winter Ball Queen Laura Fuessle.

Basketball

The varsity squad brought home two new trophies, the MSL and the state regional championship awards. Several new team records were set this year, including the most points scored by a player in a single game, 42, by junior Brian Allsmiller. Allsmiller, leading the league in scores and rebounds, lead the team. He scored his 1000th goal this season, a feat that isn't accomplished very often. Senior Tim Stonerook gave much support for the team with his excellent rebounding and shooting ability. The Bison were also led by junior Fred Heesch and senior George Bastable, both showing outstanding defensive effort for the team. Junior Mike Ledna showed a fine assist record this season. Throughout the season the Bison remained fighting to stay at the top of their league, and they succeeded. As great as they were this year, next year may prove even better. The junior varsity team also had a sensational record, winning every single game they played. Both the sophomore and freshman teams also showed exceptional improvement.

Wrestling

The Buffalo Grove wrestlers, led by senior captains Rich Wilhelm and Doug Browning, and juniors Tim Foley and Gregg Thomson, enjoyed a very successful season. Among their accomplishments, the Bison grapplers took second place in conference and a first for the second consecutive year in districts.

In taking first at districts, the Bison propelled five wrestlers, Foley, Wilhelm, Thomson, Browning, and Dunne into the sectional meet at Barrington. At sectionals, Foley placed third, Thomson and Browning seconds, and Wilhelm breezed through the meet to first place while upping his undefeated record to 38-0. On the strengths of these performances, the Bison placed second at sectionals. In addition, Wilhelm, Thomson, and Browning all qualified for the state meet at the University of Illinois in Champagne.

Other strong performances were given this season by Bob Fechtner, Tim Dunne, Chris Rugg, and Dave Millay. Coach Riccio, with a solid foundation of underclass wrestlers, should have some strong teams in the years to come.

Hockey

The Buffalo Grove hockey team under coach Earl Newton has finished the season with a 7-13-3 record. Although this might seem like a disappointing season, the Bison did well for a relatively new team.

This is the second year for the Bison and it is a big improvement over last year. Bill Donato, their team goalie, is really helping the team with the aid of Jim Newton and Mark Othick on defense.

The team's offense is comprised of Brian Locker at right wing, Pat Reilly at left, and David Zimmer at center. Zimmer is the team's leading goal scorer and third in the league. Although the team has its good points, they did not play to their full capacity. Once they develop their playing skills, however, they will become a very promising team.

Gymnastics

This year's gymnastics teams enjoyed an excellent season. Coached by Dennis Mazur, top performers on the varsity squad included seniors Mark Haisley on the parallel bars, Mark Farrington on the rings, and Mike Rine on the trampoline. Other top performers were juniors Fred Bista in floor exercise and Lee Battaglia on the hi-bar and sophomore Dewey Deal, all-around. Besides the tournaments the team also traveled to an invitational meet at Mundelein and placed second. Coach Mazur mentioned the Wheeling meet as a "good" meet, since Wheeling is a Buffalo Grove rival and the score was so close.

The freshman-sophomore team also did well. Coached by John Isaacs, the team had a number of very good performers. Among them were sophomores Joe Scott on rings, Gary Adelizzi on hi-bar, and Pat McNeely (whom Coach Isaacs cited as the best performer) on side horse, and freshmen Jim Muenz and Dan Guenther, both all-round.

Swimming

The swim team had two major goals this season. The first was to finish in the top half of its conference; the second was to be represented at the state meet. Both accomplishments were realized. The team placed third at the conference meet, and it is sending diver Alan Cymbol to the state meet. Coach Harrington feels the team has done extremely well this year compared to the team's two previous years with a first year record of 1-8, and a second year record of 5-7. There were many contributors to this year's fine record of 9-4; they were: seniors Mike Foley, Steve Melcher, and Tim Shekleton, juniors Mike Yaske and Alan Cymbol, and sophomore John Elliot. Mike Foley for three consecutive years has been the team's most valuable players as well as its captain. Along with the many new accomplishments, the team has broken all of its past records. With each year, the swim team has improved greatly; it was Coach Harrington's hope that the team's rate of improvement will continue.

Volleyball

The volleyball team had a very successful season, improving tremendously over last year. Coach VonGerichten mentioned two of the members of the varsity squad, Michelle Smithern and Debbie Underwood, as being very good players. Both were selected all-conference. Coach VonGerichten said there were no superstars on the junior varsity squad but that all members had done well. She also mentioned that two players would be leaving this year's team, Sue O'Heir and Cathy Figel, but that the others would be on next year's team.

The varsity squad had a record of eleven wins, three losses this year; the junior varsity, two wins, six losses. "Barrington was definitely our toughest opponent," said Coach VonGerichten, while "good meets were played against Schaumburg (out of two games, both scores were 20:15, in favor of Buffalo Grove) and Hersey (out of three games, scores were 21(Buffalo Grove) :19(Hersey), 18:20, and 20:15.

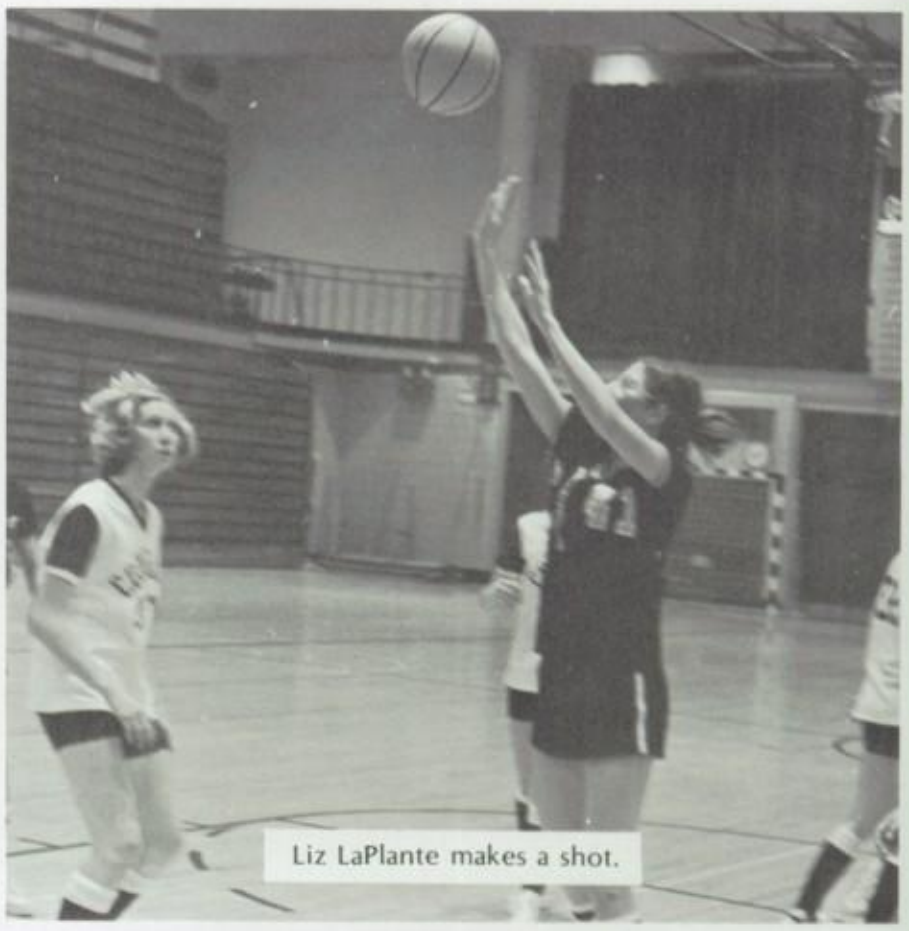
Basketball

"Competitive" is the word that best describes this year's girl's basketball team. After two years of only producing one win, this year's team has found the winning formula. Preparation for this season included one week of summer camp in Iowa and three weeks of four hour practice periods this summer under Coach Penstone.

The nucleus of the team included seven returning players. An important addition to this year's team has been Bev Torain. She has made the team more competitive inside and on the court. They have also added four freshman to the varsity team. Quickness, speed and unlimited effort have proven to be the dominant winning factors for the team. Outside shooting has brought the average up seventeen points per game over last year. Joyce Gallagher averaged about fourteen points a game, while she and Sally Michaelson served as the team's captains.



Liz LaPlante makes a shot.

Ballad Of Sundance

Sundance rode the wind-tossed fields,
On a Shetland called King's Crown,
Over the dusty flatlands and hills,
A wanderer from town to town.

Till he met his lady fair,
A ballroom dancer in Abilene.
Her name was Mary-Anne,
but to him she was a queen.

She'd say, "Sundance,"
She'd say, "Sundance," She'd say, "Sundance, I'm your home."

Now what makes a man wander,
As most men say they must.
For on one day Sundance left,
Riding off in clouds of dust.

He galloped past the ballroom,
Hoping that he wouldn't be seen,
But she caught a glimpse of Sundance,
And she ran out to him and screamed.

She screamed, "Sundance,"
She screamed, "Sundance,"
She screamed, "Sundance, come home!"

He was dead and buried in August
From a deputy's vengeful gun.
Shot by that coward in the back,
Never had a chance to run.

She found out in late November,
At the winter's season's start.
She found herself a six shooter,
And shot herself right in the heart.

She cried "Sundance,"
She cried "Sundance,"
She cried "Sundance, come home."

There was born from that a legend,
About voices cried in the night.
A woman was heard screaming, "Sundance,"
When no one was in sight.

And sometimes hoof beats are still heard,
In dusty, broken-down Abilene,
It's Sundance coming home again,
To ride off with his queen.

She'll say, "Sundance,"
She'll say, "Sundance," She'll say, "Sundance, you're home."

Identity Crisis

Bearing the inevitable paunch of middle age, the typical commuter decends from the roaring train.

A nondescript sculpture amid so many Xerox copies,
he wears a camel-colored trench coat;
a collar button missing.

Carrying a black attache case containing his existence;
3 typed pages and a crossword puzzle book, he is often lost in the wave of Seven a.m. businessmen who have cornered the market on trenchcoats, and attache cases.

Boring brown hair, graying vaguely at temples, worn conservatively short,
He walks along the pavement,

wearing black-rimmed glasses perched precariously on his nose almost daring them to fall off.

His expression — total blankness as if he were trapped somewhere between limbo and purgatory.

Monthly train ticket protrudes from black leather wallet; brown leather-gloved hands grip carefully a copy of the evening newspaper.

He is the average ordinary rider of the five-fifteen — easily indistinguishable from fellow commuters.

Portrait

The deliberate creaks of rhythmic rocking fill the dim room and slightly sway the graceful sculpture of black folded over stiff knees.

Veined, transparent hands relax, quiet,
in a valley of black cloth;
A cameo captures and calms
a cascading collar of lace.

The sparse, smoky light of dusk glints, soft, on a silver coil of hair;
Its delicate curves spiral.
A face,
pearl gray with age and finely wrinkled with complicated creases like old parchment, rests, content and serene.

Reposing above an aristocratic nose, misty eyes gently recall faded faces.
Memories surface slowly of parasols and waltzes,
sashes and carriages,
of intricate embroidery beside the parlor window.

Reminiscing thus,
they stare vacantly at gawking tourists from their portrait upon a gallery wall.

Grandma Priddy

Close your eyes and you can see her
The memories are all contained
Her small fragile frame built of love
Dancing and playing together
The smile full of grace never lost

In her yard grew the best garden
Roses so beautiful, growing high above the rest
Summer nights in old rocking chairs on the porch
She rocked so slow and smooth as mine was a race car
The old squirrel that used to hide, but we knew it was around Counting stars, making wishes

Her legs bad, swollen, bulging, hurting
But never a sign of complaint was heard
Only silent hope to be able to walk a park again

Even her house was unique
It had her touch, her memories now ours
The old kitchen sink, many meals that were cooked on the old stove,
All was simple, yet it all stood out

She buried her only children and the only man she ever loved
It wasn't easy for her
Yet she was strong-willed
For years she suffered and yet she never stopped loving us

We took her from her home of fifty years plus
And moved her to a warmer place
Its there she died
It makes me shudder to think I'd never see her again

Yet in my mind I see her on the porch
Standing like she used to with her shoulders bending toward us
Small wrinkled arms each taking a turn to wave
Her face, yet wrinkled, was of a child's face
The smiles there, but the gleam in her gray eyes Showed the sadness of us leaving

She gave us love; she was everything
Shut your eyes, think, feel of the love that was there
A rose inside the garden of life
Gone forever, but memories contained.

Impressions of Child in a Room — by Edward Villard
As seen in the Art Institute, Chicago

I see the girl,

A tiny child.

At play, at home

Alone, yet among friends.

Amusing herself as

A child does.

Oblivious to the world.

Her picture captured in a moment,

Yet, her whole lifetime

In whisps of paint upon the canvas.

More than a picture,

I see the display as

A mirror. A mirror

To look back into the past

At myself. Me,

Alone, yet among friends.

Amusing myself as

A child does.

Is the girl a stranger?

Or am I looking at myself?

Summer Nights (long ago)

It's half past nine at night.
We're nine years old
And we sit on cooling lawns
Talking of fireflies
And baseball Players.
We thwack our gloves with tiny fists
Till they smell of sweet leather.
And stretch our throats back
To stare at stars. Then,
Somehow, we realize it's time
To steal home.

A cloud rides by like a knight in shining silver armor jousting with a lance of sunlight.
Pale white wisps sigh imperceptibly as their fragile shadows flit

A foaming dragon, clutching with curly claws, twists into intertwined patterns across the sky.
Stretching leisurely on the horizon, another yawns and drifts lazily away.

Tinged with crimsoned scarlet,
like a rosy-cheeked child,
a chubbier cloud tumbles and rolls recklessly, heedless of its more dignified elders who glide, united,
in a massive bank of disapproving gray.

A Feeling

Alone on the beach
Endless waves of icy water bathed in frozen moonlight.
Velvet ribboned sand rolling in a gentle dance.
A touch of breeze through rumbled hair brings distant voices, treble and bass vibrations, calling, questioning. The waves call too, a lulling, dreamy chant, their call is stronger.

A feeling, like a whispered shadow, creeps closer, tentatively searching for an opening to the mind. Groping to find it, to pull it in, the feeling is always just beyond reach, beyond comprehension.

Again the waves call, insistent and sharp, piercing the opaque night air.
Suddenly severed, the feeling is gone.
Like the waves it has receded. A moment longer and I might have known.
A moment longer and I might have found myself.

Fair Game

Black moved the pawn forward two spaces. "It's unlikely," he conceded, "but possible. After all, who knows what could happen?"

"Who knows, indeed?" White echoed, his hand sliding the bishop along the black squares. He studied his position for a moment, then sat back in satisfaction as he met his opponent's watchful eyes. "Marshall's taken Carver's Point — but then, you'd know that already, wouldn't you?"

"I suppose I would," Black said carelessly. His rook moved silently across the board, coming to rest opposite a solitary white pawn. As he looked up, he added, "Damit, man, do you expect me to sit by, uninformed, while my men make chaos of an organized army? I can't afford that!"

White weighed out the possibilities in his mind and finally shifted the position of his queen. "That doesn't say much for the integrity of your men, does it? To make them dependent on one commanding officer —"

"— is the mark of a good soldier! I, myself, have to answer to someone else. Don't you?" Black's knight jumped a row of pawns savagely. "Take away command, and you're left with an organization of bloody farmers!" He spit out the words loathingly.

White was silent for a moment. "It's a setback," he said at last, "one learns to live with." He moved a rook across the board smoothly, and looked up at his opponent. "A setback — nothing more."

Mike DeGroot Lithograph

"No? That's an odd attitude to have — especially as it's the doings of those same farmers that have you here in the first place. I must confess, I didn't think you'd agree to this game." Black lifted a white pawn and replaced it with one of his own.

"I don't have much of a choice, now, do I?" White asked, repositioning his queen. "It's a gamble I wouldn't like to take again."

"Even if you win?"

"Especially if I win."

Black laughed. "There's little chance of that happening; your farmers are hardly a threat to professionals." As if to prove the point, his bishop knocked the white queen neatly and efficiently out of its square.

"Check," Black said.

"You haven't won yet," White pointed out, and moved his king to the side.

Black slid a rook down the far end of the board. "Checkmate," he replied in satisfaction, and sat back in his chair as White looked at the board mutely. After a moment, he spoke again. "Well, what's it to be? Surrender or fight?"

"Surrender," White said softly.

Black raised a bushy eyebrow. "Not what I'd have chosen, at any rate, Are you certain you've made the right decision?"

"It's the only decision," said White, thinking back on the events of the past few years. "A surrender — your terms, your time. It's got to be done this way."

Black pushed away from the table and stood up. "It was a fair game," he said, "and it's YOUR choice . . . Very well — surrender it is. Though if you ask me, it's a mistake."

White stood. "You said it yourself — farmers are hardly a match for professional soldiers. I think that's been proved rather well."

"Shall we say, Appomattox?" Black suggested, accompanying him to the door.

"All right. Tomorrow morning?"

"Tomorrow morning," Black agreed, and they shook hands.

Outside, a young man in a worn gray uniform stood at attention as the door opened, and he saluted the two men that came out.

"Horses ready, Harris?" White asked.

"Yes sir," the young man replied.

"Bring them around, then." White turned to face Black. "You're a hard man, Grant."

Black shook his head. "You gambled, and you lost. That's all there is to it."

"Perhaps." He mounted the horse led by young Harris.

"Appomattox," Ulysses S. Grant reminded him.

"I'll be there," General Robert E. Lee said quietly. "Count on it — I'll be there."

Square Peg

Round hole is made for little square peg.
Everyone looks surprised . . . then shrugs it off.

Finely-made child, laughing too quickly, smiling too much.
Sneakers, "Like the other kids," on feet that do not run fast enough for children's games.
Eagerly he comes, naive in his anticipation.

Jerky movements made with hands and feet,
he stands, face as pale as his dreams of acceptance.

Little round pegs on chubby legs protest, and slide into round holes.
One, different, watches and waits trustingly for his turn.

Small friends are merely tolerant.
They are taught no other way.
Large brown eyes smile, puzzled, a growing hurt and disbelief.
Shine out on an indignant world that is all fuss . . . no action.

Everyone stands awkwardly.
Hands full of little square pegs.

Small forlorn figure, life-weary, sits under a supportive oak.
Little spasmodic waves set the defenseless body trembling, but not from sobs.

Cheeks should be round, red as ripe, huge shiny apples.
They are thin and translucent.
Eyes do not recognize the realities of a cruel, childish world.
Dark brown lashes flutter. Delicate twigs in the wind.

One day he will grow up. It will be different.
That is someday
Now it hurts.

One day the little square peg will fit into a hole.

Child, like a little old man trudges home.
Square peg will not fit yet.
So tomorrow he will be back.

The Conductor

He enters to the sound of squealing strings, tooting horns,
whispering woods.
To the podium he strides, standing straight and regal
in a neat deep black suit with tails.

He raises his hands;
silence falls.
There is much power
and control in his hands.
By making a slight move
a whole orchestra changes tune.

Wildness yet control.
Appendages flailing about,
but no move wasted
for they all have meaning.
Soft fluid motions
bring forth delicate and sweet music.
The strong and sudden,
loud crashing cascades
of deep thunderous music.

The finalle is ended.
Around he turns to face a standing ovation.

His face wears a smile.
A smile of mild intensity,
one of gratitude for the audience reaction.
A smile of pleasure,
for he loves his work.
Not a large smile,
for he must appear serious.

He bows,
from the waist,
in a smooth European style.
A wide majestic sweep of the arm,
to acknowledge the orchestra.
Once more he bows.
The podium he leaves,
with a gait not suggesting hurry,
not suggesting reluctance to leave.

Backstage.
He is the man with a hundred friends,
the ladies he does amuse,
with the men he shakes hands,
and accepts praise with a modest grace.
The most popular of the hour.

But now the people are gone.

Once more he is at the podium, casting his eyes about the empty auditorium.
He walks away.
His footsteps echo,
and re-echo
in the chambers of his heart, for it is as empty as the auditorium.

As after each performance,
he is alone.

Ballad of Molly McGee

There's an old Scottish tale of a romance unplanned where the fog lies low on the lap of the land and the wind blows over a cold, gray sea whispering softly of Molly McGee.

Now, Molly McGee was a soft-hearted lass who loved the small rabbits amid the tall grass, and when a young hunter stood up and took aim,
Molly was anxious to end his cruel game.

To stop him from shooting, to spoil all his fun,
Molly McGee threw himself on the gun, crying, "Don't shoot the poor beast without a fair trial!"
And young Jim MacDoogal Stepped back with a smile.

With Molly and Jim it was love at first sight.
They walked through the woods and talked all through the night, and when the bright sun rose up over the hill they planned their new future above the old mill.

But Jim and his hunters went out the next day and never returned, so the legends do say;
a bear must have caught them, to spoil their endeavor, and Molly McGee lost her lover forever.

Thus endeth the life of young Molly McGee, who threw herself off a cliff into the sea.
The villagers whisper; they laugh and they scorn,
but no one will near there upon early morn.

For the old Scottish tale of a romance unplanned
where the fog lies low on the lap of the land,
and the wind blows over a cold, gray sea,
warns of the ghost of young Molly McGee.

Modern Art

As I pass the stuff
Hung upon the walls as art,
I am touched
With a bit of nausea
This paper mache and nailed figure
Is Art?
Has meaning?
I have walked through the rooms
Wondering who has the gall
To hang THIS,
A child's craft,
In the halls with Masters.
It is new,
Fantastically acclaimed.
"What imagination! What force!"
What junk!
Yet this is the "art" of today.
People say there is depth,
So it is agreed.
Even though I don't understand it or like it,
I must not appear ignorant.
Why not?
I do not judge you as a person,
But I don't like your art.
The busy nothingness gives me a headache.
It is merely child's play.
Perhaps I should have lived a hundred years ago.
But the most interesting thing I see here
Is an empty showcase.

Life begins when you recall your past.

Life is your first Christmas,
The waitful hour and twinkled atmosphere
The joy of the morning
The sadness of its leave

Life is the day you left for kindergarten,
With your mother saying goodbye and you starting to cry.
You had never left home before, but the day ended and it wasn't that bad.

Life is the day your first tooth fell out,
and you showed everyone.
The night when you put it under your pillow,
and the morning when you received a coin.

Life is the never ending trying,
Like when your father ran along with you on the bicycle and you fell,

But you'd try again
One day you'll ride down that street all by yourself you knew it and you did it.

Life is the day of your first birthday party with your friends you're king
You eat enough ice cream and cake to explode and yet
you always want more.

Life is the day when your cousins came over,
And you get your good suit covered with mud.
"Mom will kill me"
but she doesn't.

Life is the day you take your girl out,
your're nervous,
what does she think?
you hope she likes you
You go out many more times.

Life is the day you graduate from high school,
And your parents are as proud as can be.
You see a tear,
it's from your mother's eye.

Life is the day you marry that girl you've never felt happier.
You grow older
And so does your family.
You experience your children's lives and your wife's.
and Life is that something you look back at and treasure never to give it up for anything never.

Rumble

To be a cat, to be so small
and gaze at the world in dark-eyed wonder, to stalk a fly
and to conquer it as it buzzes furiously between your needle-padded paws,

as you leap the green shoulder of the lawn in great lithe bounds.

To lie, compact and purring, on a warm rug all day and dream
of suitors and flowerpots.
dream things that never were,
might never be,
but are as real for you as the spankings you get when you are naughty.

Watching Rust Eat

I float
half submerged in a puddle of lethargy —
A blob of mottled lumps of flesh.

I strain to raise my leaden arm — sluggish, it responds.
Rubber-tipped fingers smudge away gritty grime from the window glass — Sullen gray light drifts in.

I focus bleary eyes on the fire escape across the alley —
Watch rust devour the rail, consume the seeping drainpipe dangling crooked by a single screw.

Seconds crawl by, tortured, measured by steady plops from an eroded faucet — Stretch into hours, dawdle, scuffle around the scared face of a clock —
Suddenly plunge, feverish, through the pits of time.

Nothing in the empty void of the past worthy of thought.
Nothing visible through the murky fog of the future.

So I float
and watch rust nibble on my bloated toe.

Editor's Statement

For each of us, this year was special in some way. Whether it was the people we met, things we did, or friends we made. High school is a time of learning, not only of math and English from books, but of life from people and experiences we'll never want to let go. And it is these people and experiences that we have tried to capture.

We are all forever holding on to the past. We hope that each one of you can now look back at this year and see it the way it was for you.

Mark Thompson

Acknowledgements

The Stampede staff would like to thank the many people who, in their own way, helped us in the production of this book: Capri Studios of Oak Park for their professional help with photography; Mr. Dennis Eder, our representative from American Yearbook Company, for his assistance and encouragement throughout the year; The BGHS Graphics Department for help with special photography; The T-Shirt factory for keeping our advisor well dressed; Bob Daulton, who drew our original buffalo nickel two years ago; Mr. James O'Neill, our advisor, for giving all of us the help and encouragement to create something for everyone.

And special thanks to the people from the Cracker Jack division of the Borden Company for permitting us to use a likeness of their package on our cover.
